

IV

This timeless quality which makes a thing a mirror of the human self, arises from the unity of space.

The unity of space is a condition where the inner relationships in space, somehow glue the space together.

In the field of color, this phenomenon is represented by a kind of inner light, in which the space is deeply unified.

And in the field of space, this phenomenon is represented by unbroken wholeness, or not-separateness, where the space itself is also unified.

In both cases this unity of space depends on fourteen very definite, but abstract geometric properties.
