

Handwritten Chinese characters, likely a title or description of the scene. The characters are arranged in two lines, with some underlined. The first line contains four characters, and the second line contains six characters. The characters are written in a cursive, calligraphic style.