

X

For someone who has once experienced this new old way of making things, it is impossible to turn back.

He will never willingly go back and take part again in the present way of making things.

And someone who has once experienced the possibility of living in a world in which this quality is being made, will never intentionally return to the barbaric world we know today.